

7 Questions All Mommies & Daddies Should Ask Themselves Before They Send Their Child To Preschool

If you are the mother or father of an infant, toddler, or preschool-age child you probably hear this question frequently: “When is your child going to preschool?” Before you answer that question, ask yourself the following:

- 1) Do you wish people would quit asking, “When is your child going to preschool?”
- 2) Does something about sending your little one off to preschool not “feel right?”
- 3) Do your instincts tell you to keep your child close to you for a little longer?
- 4) Do you have a sense or a “gut feeling” that your child will be safer and happier with you at home?
- 5) Do you enjoy spending lots of time with your child?
- 6) Do you get a sense of deep satisfaction and joy from helping your child learn new things?
- 7) Would you rather NOT send your child to preschool?

If you answered “yes” to any of the 7 questions above – it doesn’t mean that you are over-protective, silly, or foolish, or that you want to deprive your child of a good start in life. It means that you love and care about your child and want what’s best for them. Lots of mommies and daddies feel the way you do and are doing something about it. They teach their little ones at home. You can do it too. We can help. Please visit our website:

www.UniversalPreschool.com

We invite you to explore the latest research about preschool and how young children learn best, read the articles, and enjoy the activities with your children that will help them develop their full potential. At UniversalPreschool.com we provide free information and resources to help you learn how to use the universe as a preschool, so that your children will grow up to be successful, well-adjusted, happy adults. Our goal is to help parents make a better universe, one child at a time.